

From: Shari McMahan <SMcMahan@csusb.edu>
Sent: Wednesday, September 29, 2021 12:19 PM
To: Colleagues <colleagues@groups.csusb.edu>
Subject: Passing Sanders McDougall

Dear Members of the Campus Community:

This morning, September 29, 2021, professor of psychology Sanders McDougall had a massive heart attack while on campus. Paramedics rushed him to the hospital, but unfortunately, they were unable to save him.

No additional details are available at this time. My deepest condolences to his spouse, Cynthia Crawford, and his family. Counselling and EAP services are being made available to the campus community. This is a tremendous loss to our university community, compounded by the suddenness and shock.

Sanders, who joined CSUSB in 1991 as an assistant professor in the psychology department, earned tenure in 1995. He was a consummate educator, dedicated to his students, the department and his research. Most recently, he served as the program director of the Undergraduate Research Training Initiative for Student Enhancement (U-RISE), which is aimed at increasing the diversity of students earning their bachelor's degrees and moving on to complete research-focused, biomedical advanced degrees.

Let us practice care and compassion with one another at this time.

In community,

Shari

WE DEFINE THE Future

Shari McMahan, Ph.D.
Provost and Vice President for Academic Affairs
California State University, San Bernardino